21st CENTURY EDUCATION, A MERE COMPETITION

by:
Estrella R. Abadia

If you want to secure your future be on top of your class. That’s how you can catch opportunity nowadays. Climbing up to the first is the major goal to have a better place in the society. There are lots of ways to succeed but only few are blessed. Let your mind bewildered on the different institutions nowadays. They tend to update the society with the achievements of every individual who compete outside their premises. They build the confidence for few individuals only and neglect the second-best achievers.

In taking considerations for these, look at those who got failures, who have been into the last of every line, who have been experiencing bullying, who have been forgotten and left behind. We, the so-called educators may also lead our youths in ending their lives. We could push them at the edge of darkness through anxiety and depression unknowingly. We may cause them ill-feeling towards the society where they should be enjoying in the first place. We could be the reason why they may hate being with everybody.

But hey, it isn’t too late yet, we can change eventually. We can create a harmonious relationship with them without giving up education. We can still take care of them while giving them the essentials of learning. We can do it gradually. But at first, let us be level-headed and be considerate about their emotions.
References:

https://curriculumredesign.org/our-work/four-dimensional-21st-century-education-learning-competencies-future-2030/?gclid=EAIaIQobChMltYXb-tfl3AIVioBwCh0MZAMzEAAYASAAEgKQ2_D_BwE

https://thinkstrategicforschools.com/education-21st-century/