In teaching, individuals learn in different ways because of their different intelligences or abilities.

Performing the many roles and responsibilities, teachers are demanded of their persona qualities, their teaching skills and strategies.

To achieve the goals in teaching, 3 (three) successful strategies are to be followed:

1. Make whatever you are teaching FUN!!!

   Kids feel happy for anything that is funny for them. Kids love to play games and run around laughing and screaming so try to incorporate sort of FUN into their learning atmosphere. You can acquire FUN by playing games or you can teach them how to spell English words by playing a game such as “Hangman”. It is a good idea to reward the children when they do a good job and accomplish the learning goal for the day.

   That way the kids will be eager to learn because it’s it appearing FUN and REWARDING for them. Always be creative!!!It is vitally important that you don’t appear to be boring to these kids. To continuously arouse the interests of kids in their learning, creativity of teachers is important. Come up with new ways to teach and new way for them to learn. The teacher’s ability to adjust their teaching involves mastery and creativity.
For example one day you can use a textbook and use an overhead projector the next day, and on the third day you can teach using social media. Everyone loves social media!

2. Make it Active!

Kids become more active when they exercise. It encourages healthy activity not only physically but mentally as well. Exercise increases the appetites of kids in eating their lunch at the right time. TPR (Total Physical Response) is a method of teaching that encourages you to associate physical movement with teaching strategies. This way the students move as they learn. It is a win-win situation.

3. Don’t Put Pressure on your Students

It is significantly necessary that your students are free from all pressures. When students do feel pressured, it discourages their learning abilities. It also makes them not want to go to school. Ways to avoid putting pressure on your student include but are not limited to these simple behaviors:

The not correcting error they make modelling correct language use. It even helps to reward them when they are correct. Don’t give everything that you do a Grade. Learners will be more open to learning if they don’t feel pressured by what their final grade will be. Every kids or learners learn differently based on the teaching strategies followed.
