A CLASSROOM, A CLASS HOME

by:
Leonora N. Eufemia
Teacher I, Culis Elementary School

Some people might think that our classroom in the school is just around the four corners. Some think of it because they are not around during our class hours, they do not deeply know our tasks, routines, and undertakings. They do not know the ins and outs of a classroom teacher.

A classroom is a class home. Children come and stay here with the teachers for more than six hours a day, from almost the sunrise to sunset. It is not only a figure of four corners or four walls with a ceiling. It is a room we call our class home.

In a class home, we built a harmonious relationship among others, peer to peer, teacher to student. We see to it that the classroom we have now has its good condition when it comes to respect, respect to give and extend to each individual not only for the learners and students but for all people who are in school and those who come in. We can give full courteousness to all human beings as well as those who have life like animals and plants.

Our class home has its goals, mission, and vision which is our common pillar to be of a good learner in our class home, we proudly say this is our class home because we teach, we feel, we give love to each and every one. We feel in our class home which we feel the same in our home, nothing is different from those we have at home. We have mother/ father here in the person of our teachers, we have brothers and sisters here in the presence of the utility men, whom we always feel the affection as family.

Our class home tends to teach us not only the scholastic abilities of learners, co-curricular activities but most importantly the good manners and right conduct.
do not forget to practice our traditions, beliefs, and camaraderie which being handed from generation to generation.

Our classroom is being supported of course by our loving and able parents, because parents are said to be our first teachers, they are always there in time of needs not only for material things which they can donate to our school but also immaterial things such as giving us the courage to lead, enthusiasm to learn, love and affection to our teachers, school staff and peers.

It is then our duty and obligation to give back what we learn from our class home, to practice what we gained from our class home, to spread the love that the teachers taught us, to share the knowledge we gained from the so-called four corners of our class home. We will not ever forget the four walls of our class home which are courage, enthusiasm, love, and knowledge which are very important for every learner as well as individuals.

Lastly, if you accept your classroom to be converted into a class home there will be no problem with regards to the teaching-learning process, the best venue for studying, the best ambiance in learning, and the best class home for teaching.

References:

Eredics, Nicole, “5 Essential Classroom Management Strategies to Keep Your Inclusive Class Running Smoothly”, 2019

Hume, Kara, “Visual Structure in the School Setting”, 2018