According to an American author and musician Mickey Hart, “Art in the classroom not only spurs creativity, it also inspires learning.” This means that teachers in the school are invited to have a classroom that is ideal, inviting, catchy and attractive. The appearance of the classroom may indeed inspire the learners.

A creative classroom is well-designed. It is so nice to see a classroom that is filled with child-friendly designs and decorations. These things are very appealing to the learners because they see colorful and interesting things.

A creative classroom is filled with instructional materials. These materials may aim to assist the learning of the students. The instructional materials are evident in the classroom for students to have better understanding and learning. Instructional materials are helpful tools to enhance learning.

A creative classroom is strategically organized. The chairs, tables and desks are arranged for the convenience and safety of the students. An organized classroom is conducive to learning and viable for effective instruction.

A creative classroom makes use of the modern technology. The employment of technology in the classroom creates better teaching-learning interaction. Furthermore, technology is very appealing to the children of the new generation.

A creative classroom has essential corners for learning. There may be the presence of reading corner, play corner, science corner and other useful amenities that would inspire the students to learn.
A creative classroom has displays of the learners’ accomplishments. Showcasing the arts and academic achievements of the students on the display boards would stimulate their interest and would increase their confidence.

Having a creative classroom is very ideal for learning and would be very essential in increasing the interest of learns to gain more in their studies.

Truly, a creative classroom yields better results on the part of the teacher and on the part of each learner.
