A DRIVE IN THE CITY

by:
Emmanda C. Cruz

Last night, I saw a commercial. It was endorsing a new car model. Of course, all the good features were shown to persuade people to buy one.

I did not blink an eye while watching that endorsement actually. I can’t help but wonder how that car will travel and be driven smoothly in Manila. They say, the capital of every state is the most progressive that it is where things are done in a quick manner. Ironically, if that car would be in Manila, I don’t think it’ll be able to show off its features. No matter how fast and smooth it is to drive, with the heavy traffic in the area, no way!

With that, I came to realize that it is related to our system. Sometimes, no matter how gigantic the plans and programs to be implemented, we still fail. For what reason? Along the way, there are some things and at the same time people who cause the delay.

Majority of the people may be working really hard but having even just one person not doing his duty will certainly affect the whole production. Similar to a well-invented car, no matter how good it is, it will not work unless its environment let it.

We, teachers, are like that car, we were designed, trained, and honed to do great things but if the world won’t fit our standards, I think we should still drive and gas up.

Our system may not be doing that good yet, but if we will all move to our destination, although the distance it travels is not that long, we’ll get there. We can get there.
Reference: