As they say, “TEACHING is the NOBLEST PROFESSION”. Being a teacher gives someone high respect towards himself and given high respect of other people. This confirms that teachers are most loved profession for it may also give you a lifetime security in work. Even when a teacher retires, he will be regarded as teacher.

To properly address the needs of the learners of today, a teacher should know how to adapt in the transforming education landscape. Being a teacher requires you to study more, you gain knowledge through different means. You are also required to level up, or should have advance yourself one step ahead or even more steps from your learners. In a fast phasing society with technologies all around, one must equipped himself with all the necessary weapons to adapt and be one of the digital native learners.

To provide the needs of the learners in the digital world, a teacher must embrace the culture of a millennial especially when someone do not belong to that age group. One must also be modernized, be more innovative and express teaching-learning process in the generation “X” individuals way.

As of today, most instructional materials are electronic, without underestimating the use of chalk and board and manila papers, but electronic IM’s are much better to use and probably more effective. They are more appreciated by the learners. These materials also caters all the needs of the learners with different learning styles and multiple intelligences.
Teachers of today, made things possible despite of lacking of materials in school. They are all known for their resourcefulness, perseverance and dedication. That is why they can produced all other professions in the working society of every community.

Whatever knowledge and learning you have as a teacher, another most important thing a teacher should have is the passion in the teaching profession. It is more likely how a teacher teach from the heart and not from the books alone. Learners may forgot the learning from the book, but not the values and good deeds the teacher shared. A specific fable may be forgotten but not the life story with lesson. As most of the people believe, learning starts from home but in school, they are honed to be global competitive individuals with values and morals to make a productive society.
