A PADDLE OF KNOWLEDGE

by:
Estrella R. Abadia

In this fast and break neck kind of life that we are in right now, we tend to have everything in an instant. We tend to have everything served in just one click. Most of the time, we care for how profligate we can achieve our wants and never consider the sweetness of it, right after we sweat to be able to get it. Somehow, this is what life teach us. Changes are so inevitable, that in a snap of our fingers there it goes.

As an educator, it is a must now that you upgrade yourself. It is not a question of how well you are when you are in your college days, it is not how good you can present the learnings, even, it is not how well you know the topic. In this present time of the so-called millennials you must know how to deal with them. It is no longer “do this, do that” term. It is about listening to them. It is more on adapting their ways of communication instead of pushing them to your discipline. It is more on hearing their rants and reasonings. For if not, you can never have their attentions. You may not build a good relationship with them, trust can never be achieved.

This is also an aspect having us as the purported twenty-first century educators. We lean towards to our learners. We care more on their welfares on the not-so-strict manner. We could definitely teach them in a not so contained spaces. You could see their chairs and things unarranged. You may see them vaguely but they are learning. It is already their chapter not ours to be stiff with them.

References:

http://www.witslanguageschool.com/NewsRoom/ArticleView/tabid/180/ArticleId/35/Teaching-Tips-Develop-Yourself-Professionally.aspx