A READER BECOMES A LEADER

by:
Mark Anthony C. Bautista
Teacher III, Sabatan Elementary School

According to Harry Truman, “Not all readers are leaders, but all leaders are readers.” But how a reader may become a leader?

Reading makes you think better. Someone who has the passion for reading may have the opportunity to enhance one’s thinking ability. Since various insights and thoughts are being read, these things make the person enhance his or her thinking ability to respond to various questions that may arise from different people in the community.

Through reading someone may be a better communicator. Through the different terminologies and vocabulary words that are read in books and other materials, a person may become a better communicator. The abundance in words may contribute to one’s communication ability in order to deal with people.

Reading broadens your knowledge. Embracing the world of reading makes someone knowledgeable. This means that thousands of ideas are met and these concepts contribute to one’s learning. Indeed, a person who reads may have ample knowledge to lead.

Because of reading, you are exposed to different events and activities. The so called information and data regarding these events and activities are very important to learn most especially if someone intends to lead a certain place, organization or territory.

Reading gives you more challenges to deal with. These challenges oblige the reader to find ways for the solutions. Through reading challenging situations, ideas or concepts, the person may be prepared to handle difficulties most especially in leading people.
By means of reading you will be able to understand people. This is very significant for you will be able to trace their distinct attributes or characteristics. As a leader you are to be acquainted to the strengths and weaknesses of people in order to make the needed adjustments.

Reading trains you to solve problem better. Through the power of reading someone may solve a certain problem in a better way. A person who spends extensive time in reading may have the ability to solve problems most especially in leading people.

Due to reading your experiences are enriched. A reader who aims to be a leader may have the foundation and strength in leading people by reading a variety of experiences of the leaders who made our history.

A reader may become a leader by means of considering the above-mentioned concepts or ideas. Take a look at them closely.

References:

https://medium.com/productivity-revolution/5-simple-reasons-why-reading-makes-you-a-better-leader-ec6533f6ec63

https://cadefit.com/become-leader-6-reasons-must-reader/