A TEACHER'S JOURNEY

by:
Aika Kristine L. Valencia
Teacher, Bataan School of Fisheries

It's not an exaggeration to say that a wonderful teacher can alter life. As some of the most important role models for student development, educators are accountable for more than just academic enrichment. If you want to be a successful and great educator, you need to touch and connect with your students' lives. You must understand the history of their family, including their interest, hobbies, strengths, and weaknesses. By forging powerful relationships, educators can influence nearly every aspect of their students' life, teaching them significant life lessons that will assist them to succeed beyond term papers, projects, reports, and standardized assessments.

We teachers may be a parent, an inspiration or role model and an influencer.

These three characteristics are really important when it comes to teaching. We all know that being a teacher isn't that easy as many people think, because it's really hard to be an ideal one. In my case, these three topics I've given will be able to mold our students and to become globally competitive.

A teacher can be an influencer because he/she can provide a trusted source of guidance for learners weighing significant life choices. Teachers can assist their students to pursue higher education, discover career possibilities, and compete in activities they might otherwise not have believed they could. Students often look to their educators as mentors with experience and understanding, and at some stage during your life, you will almost definitely be requested for guidance as an educator. School is regarded a learner's second home and spends his/her time there. A teacher plays a significant role and he/she happens to be an influencer, just like teaching classes, not only from books but also from life lessons. Teachers tend to expand their vocabulary for the sake of their students; they always adjust so that students will be able to understand what they are trying to say. Likewise, it is about doing their duties and responsibilities not just for the salary but because it's their passion. A teacher can make an impact on someone's life and that makes him/her an influencer.

A teacher can be an inspiration and can serve as a role model. A kid learns multiple kinds of intelligence from a "specialist" who masters and spends time studying (with profound comprehension) a particular topic. Teachers are the finest illustration of a role model. When a kid grows older, he/she finds someone he/she can imitate. Teachers happen to be his/her best example because he/she has a lot of life experience. Like what I've said, teachers can change someone's life, but it all depends upon his teaching profession or the way he interacts with his students. Inspiring learners is essential to ensuring their achievement and encouraging them to fulfill their potential. Students who are motivated by their educators can do amazing things, and that motive almost always remains with them. Inspiration can also take many forms to guide them towards their future career, from assisting students through the academic year and their short-term objectives. Teachers inspire and encourage their students to strive for greatness, live to their full potential and see the best in themselves.

Teachers can also be a parent. They shape their students' minds and assist them to acknowledge their talents and objectives. To some educators, it's nothing but a work that pays the bills, but to others, it's their lives. Learning from school is far from learning anywhere else. We regarded teachers to be our parents inside the school, but he can also be a friend and someone you can count on. Because they do not only solve grades but also determine and assess the difficulties and issues of their learners. Students are like wet cement, they're imprinted with everything they're taught. The relationship between a teacher and a student should be more personal than professional. Some of us believe that the main function of educators is to educate kids to act and to judge what is correct and wrong. However, teachers on the other side play the role of second parents to their students. They are the ones who correct the students if something went wrong like what they do in their own kids. The educators also play an important part in shaping the pupils' lives under their care. Just like a parent, he/she is willing to do everything just to provide his/her students need and helping them to get through from those challenges they encounter.

To sum it up, you can be one of those three or you can be those three, but the most important thing here is that a teacher who never gets tired to master new learning, improving his knowledge and skills. Lastly, his dedication and passion to mold his students to become a better person in the near future is recommendable.

References:
https://teach.com/what/teachers-change-lives/
https://www.primeministerofindialist.in/essay-on-role-of-teacher-in-our-life/