Teaching is highly considered as a multifaceted profession because the teacher performs multiple roles in the fulfillment of the job. Though it is difficult to do things at the same period or situation in life, the teacher manages to be at his or her best doing several roles which are as follows:

Role Model. A teacher is a role-model. He or she portrays actions and displays a character that are worth emulating. A teacher exudes the qualities that are in conformity to the standards and expectations of the society.

Socializing Agent. A teacher is a socializing agent. He or she can mingle well with different kinds of people. He or she can reach out to superiors, fellow teachers, students, parents and to other stakeholders.

Learning Facilitator. A teacher is a learning facilitator. This idea entails that the teacher is the one guiding the learners in their quest for knowledge and competencies. The teacher is the one organizing all the learning activities for the students.

Curriculum Implementer. A teacher is a curriculum implementer. It is the responsibility of a teacher to deliver all the lessons and most essential skills needed by the learner as instructed by the curriculum. Being a curriculum implementer, the teacher assures that the lessons in a certain learning area, in a particular grade level are completely taught.
Classroom Supporter. A teacher is a classroom supporter. This depicts the idea that the teacher supports learners inside the classroom by providing them with all their needs and providing educational opportunities that are essential to attain.

Promoter of Social Order and Equilibrium A teacher is a promoter of social order and equilibrium. This illustrates that the teacher implements proper discipline among learners and fairness in dealing with them. By means of portraying the role the teacher, he or she is able to encourage the students to be well-disciplined and respectful.

Motivator A teacher is a motivator. There may be times that the learner feels sadness, stress, weariness and depression but a teacher makes his or her way to motivate him or her to go on with life and be positive.

Moral Adviser. A teacher is a moral adviser. As a moral adviser, the teacher emphasizes the importance of morality. He or she teaches the learners the ethical standards that will guide them in their lives.

These are the meaningful roles of teachers that are admirable and awe-inspiring. Indeed, teaching is not merely providing lessons but it branches out to different facets, aspects or roles. Truly, a teaching a multifaceted profession.
