ABC OF SUCCESSFUL EDUCATION

Certainly, education generally dictates the success of an individual. More often than not, successful education is seen as an indicator of an individual’s success in life. To realize this, factors need be considered to open the avenue and explore all possibilities to success. However, it must be understood that education is serving its purpose for it to be called a success. For all intents and purposes, an individual need to consider these factors to ensure that he has a successful education:

ACCEPTANCE. One has to accept the hardships in acquiring quality education. The search for education is not along a well-paved road. There are surely humps and bumps along the road. Accept these things as part of reality. After all, these are part and parcel of the search for true education. As in life, nothing is offered in silver platter. Challenges always meet us along the way.

BRAVERY. If the obstacles toward that goal become clear and unavoidable, be brave to face whatever form they may be. These challenges may dampen one’s spirit. But let these not be the reason to cease and turn on the other side. Let bravery be the armor needed to combat the attacks on the quest. Let bravery be the guard against the forces of negativity.

COMPROMISE. Learn to compromise. There will surely be instances that personal principles will run counter to the principles and ideals of education. But then, those are not in place to derail the search but to test the conviction of someone in search of true education. Compromise does not mean giving up one’s principle but simply articulating the point and making it heard.
Successful education is simply said, but its ABC may serve as guide in achieving the purpose for which it is designed. And for education to serve its purpose, it must always be based on someone’s conviction to achieve its purpose and be instrumental in life’s success.
