In modern days, the grown-ups would always say youngster today are not the same as before, they are seeming to be more hard-headed and easy-go-lucky. They just wanted to do whatever they wanted to do without thinking the consequences.

Belt, clothes hanger, or slipper, you choose which of these will be used to beat and spank you when you misbehave or you will be hit by the stick or squat with a number of books in your hand. Aside from that, you can also receive hard pinch on your skin, twisting your ear, or pulling your sideburns. Also, when it comes to school, if the students misbehave, didn’t able to finish school-work related activities, didn’t follow rules they take the consequences of their actions. And relation to that, most of the students behave well, complete their tasks, and follow rules. They did because they are afraid to receive punishment or treatment related to their action. By implementing punishment, you can correct bad behavior or habit of an individual.

But, because of too much treating of child’s behavior lead us to corporal punishment. In some reasons, corporal punishment can lead to instigation of violence and abuse. That for some instances when a parent or teacher is angry, they are more likely to commit corporal punishment that may come across their limits. Moreover, a learner or a child that live or raised by punishment tend to grow up more violently. So, the higher-ups issue an order to stop this kind of treatment to the students by issuing the Bill of the Anti-Corporal Punishment Act of 2017. This promotes the protection for children against violence that may hinder student’s self-esteem, mental and physical development, spiritual and emotional development.
Now that corporal punishment is not allowed, what happening is that children act whatever they wanted to because there is no punishment to be done on them. They didn’t do their assignment, didn’t finish their tasks, and didn’t engage themselves in reviewing their lessons. Most of all, they don’t even care if they will fail or pass their subject. They tend to more aggressive and do unnecessary actions because they do know we can not beat or spank them.

So, what will happen now? Is it a bet to abolish corporal punishment?
