There are schools that are fortunate to have parents who are actively participating in the school and who are dedicatedly involving themselves to guide their children’s education. The schools need more parent like these to contribute to the progress and success of the students in their studies.

The active presence of parents assists in the academic difficulties of the students in different learning areas. Through passionate cooperation with teachers and consistent communication regarding the hardships being encountered by their children, the parent’s involvement would become evident and successful.

The parents also play a role in the attainment of better academic achievements among students. The active parental involvement motivates the students to excel in their academic pursuits and to soar higher in the school.

The active parents help in preventing absenteeism and drop-outs. These parents may assist in home visitations and in communicating with other parents regarding the reasons for students’ absenteeism. Moreover, drop-outs may be lessened or totally be prevented if the parents are always in contact with the teachers in school.

The active parents may also assist in the discipline and behavior of the students. The school administration, guidance counselor, class advisers and even subject teachers are being supported by parents who are actively participating in the school.

The active parental involvement in the school helps in attaining programs and projects. If the school has enthusiastic parents who are always supporting varied school programs and projects that are intended for the benefits of the students, then success is achieved.

The active parental involvement develops camaraderie. Harmony is achieved if the parents extend their deep understanding and support to the people leading and managing the school and the students. Having regular visit and talk with the said people builds goodwill.

One of the reasons for the success of the school activities is active parental involvement. The school needs the participation of the parents year-round. From the moment that a child is enrolled in the school, the parent is expected to join the school in the realization of different worthwhile activities for the holistic development of the students.

Parents also have the ability to create linkages. Since they are the ones who have contacts with the external stakeholders, then having links with them regarding the realization of educational programs and projects would be possible.

Active parental involvement is what we really need in the school. Parents are considered very important in attaining the progress of the school and its people.
