ADAPTATION: AN IMPORTANT CODE INSIDE THE WORK SETTING

by:
Marisol B. Cunanan
Disbursing Officer II – Pablo Roman NHS

Being in an environment where we are not used to, is really hard as it requires a lot of adjustment. Changes, of course, is the first one that will be observed not only in your life but specifically in your personality as a person. The concept may sound simple – a new environment, different culture, and various kinds of people to deal with, but that is exactly the hardest part, the process of adaptation. One best example where this process is indeed a requirement is inside the workplace.

There are different ways on how to adapt easily inside the workplace. Probably, discipline will be the first one that you should learn as it indicates a percentage of your personality. We usually apply for work to learn something new and grow. Also, to widen our knowledge and capabilities to cope up in a different situation that demands critical thinking. And there, discipline should always come first.

Another one respects not only the superiors but to everyone. Differences inside the workplace are observable. And that is one of the things to be considered. As Albert Einstein said, “I speak to everyone in the same way, whether he is a garbage man or the president of the university”, which means that there may be a difference when it comes to the level of power, but respect is something that everyone deserves.

As the aforementioned statement above, change is also present, and will always be present inside the workplace. Maybe, the people that you are dealing with have several careers and jobs already and surely, companies are making the rotation of employees... from here to there based on the current needs. Just recognize the changes that you will see. Eventually, you yourself will experience those changes whether you like it or not.

Moreover, be optimistic. Embrace the roles that will be given to you even if you don’t like it. Always remember to give your best shot because you may not notice, but you are making progress from time to time. Learn to love what is assigned to you. Meaning, be flexible and always be positive. Look forward to what you are aiming for, which is the literal success.

It is very important that you know your purpose when applying for a job. As most people say, expect the unexpected. There’ll be hard times, and easy times of course. But prefer to challenge yourself especially during the start because there, you will know more about yourself. Always keep in mind that every company has a mission, vision, and objectives. Fulfill it and be the reason for your company’s success.

References:
https://www.quickbase.com/blog/10-tips-for-handling-change-in-the-workplace