Amid the pandemic, online learning may be advisable as an alternative delivery mode for teaching and learning. Thinking of an interactive way of delivering instruction, online learning would be the best suggestion.

Online learning makes use of the electronic gadget or equipment with the aid of the internet. Lessons and competencies are taught electronically. The following are the advantages of this alternative delivery mode for the current situation in our society in adhering to the needs of the learners:

Interactive. Online learning is said to be interactive. This means that the teacher and learners are actively using their computers and other electronic gadgets for educational purposes. Further, the teachers showcase different slides, presentations, videos, film clips, and others to supplement learning.

Accessible. Online learning is also accessible. Computers and gadgets are available everywhere nowadays and internet connectivity is reaching different areas. With these things, online teaching and learning may be possible and realizable. People have access to computers and the internet. There are also many available instructional materials on different websites. Thus, online learning is indeed available for people's usage.

Fun. The lighter thing about online learning is that it brings fun and excitement to learners. Using gadgets and the internet for educational purposes would be delightful and at the same time fruitful. With online learning, the interaction is made virtual but everyone is reachable.
Safe. Now that we are experiencing a pandemic, it is preferable to have online learning. The students don't need to regularly go to school to study because they will just meet their teachers and classmates online. This mode would be safe both for the teacher and the learner.

Manageable. Online learning is truly manageable. The teacher and students may easily use this mode. The teacher instructs through online connection while the students listen and interact in return.

Timely. Amidst the pandemic is online learning where the teacher and students may utilize it to continue in the realization of education. This is such an appropriate method for this time wherein it is not advisable to have face-to-face learning. Thus, it is relevant.

Economical. This mode of learning is also in a way economical. The teachers and students may save time, money, and effort. Online learning is indeed cost-effective.

Online learning is such a relevant alternative delivery mode which may be considered as a good option in the continuity of education among the K to 12 learners. Its advantages are evident and it is given for the teachers and learners to utilize.
