ADVANTAGES OF PARENT’S INVOLVEMENT IN THE SCHOOL

by:
Reminda T. Feliciano
Teacher II, Orani South Elementary School

The school undeniably needs the support of the community in order to further guide the schoolchildren in their pursuit to much advanced and better learning. The parent being one of the major school stakeholders should be given a chance to participate in developing, honing, enhancing and enriching the ability, capability, aptitude or skill of each student.

The advantages of parent’s involvement in school must be considered by the school administrators and teachers in order to realize the benefits it may bring particularly to each learner.

Advantage 1. Moral support. - The moral support that the parents may give to the school is vital in order for the school administration and teachers to be inspired in offering the best services and quality education to the learners. Having felt the presence and support of parents for the school is truly endearing.

Advantage 2. Parent Visibility – The parents’ visibility in the various school activities is very significant for their involvement may physically support and boost the confidence of the schoolchildren as they aim for success in their performances in whatever school activity.

Advantage 3. Transparency – The parents’ usual visits in the school may be an advantage for the school administrator and teachers to show the real condition and operation in the institution. It is a better practice that the school is transparent to the parents in order to show how honest the school is in terms of management.
Advantage 4. Better Understanding – The parents and the people in the school may promote better understanding if the parents’ involvement is realized. Thus, the parents would be able to understand the people in the school if they have regular conferences together.

Advantage 5. Constant Communication – The parents may come personally to the school or may call regarding the development of the students. Further, the attendance, attitudes, behaviors and academic progress of the students may be monitored fully if the parents are always there to inquire.

Advantage 6. Better Learning – The primary beneficiary on the good connection between the school and parents is the learner. If the school and the parents are working hand in hand for the guidance and education of the child, better learning is attained.

Advantage 7. More Achievements – The students may have more achievements not only in the school but also in inter-school contests and competitions if the parents are giving full support to them. The school and parents may merge their support in creating the best from the students.

Advantage 8. Better Guidance – It is a fact that parents are very influential to their children. The teachers being the agents of change may also influence the learners. Having combined forces, proper guidance to students may be achieved.

By considering these advantages, the relationship between the parent and the school may become better and smoother thus the learners may benefit from it most especially in the enhancement of their academic achievement.

The parent’s involvement in the school has a great impact in the academic performance and achievement of the student and it should be promoted for the benefit of the educational clientele.
References:

http://www.washingtonchristian.org/blog/the-importance-of-parental-involvement-in-your-childs-education

School Improvement Research Series.

Hornby Garry (2011). Parental Involvement in Childhood Education.