Multiple learning resources are really beneficial to students especially in Distance learning. Since face to face instructions are prohibited in times of the pandemic, education really calls for a multiple learning resources that would help in a more comprehensive way of learning. There are actually several learning resources that the teacher could choose from. These are the modules, radio and television but among these resources, video lessons whether in television or just a simple creation of a teacher is the most effective one. Here are the reasons why.

1. Video lessons can show a lot of creative illustrations and visuals that help in a clear demonstration and execution of the lesson which at the same time catches the interest of the children.

2. Though there are some who are auditory learners, there are still more inclined to both audio and visual learning as what “Millenials” are really exposed to.

3. Learners may find video lessons as an entertaining one because they had that feeling that they are just watching a show or movie instead of just simply studying. In short, this breaks their boredom in studying.

4. Video lessons can be saved and can be watched repeatedly if the learner missed to watch it at a certain time. If they their cellphone are not loaded, they can still watch the video in Facebook by the time their cellphone has a load especially if the video lessons are filed in a folder.

5. This is also a paperless learning resource. The school wouldn’t have a hard time allocating funds for the reams of coupon bonds and the ink for printing modules. They just need to spend an external drive for the video which I think is cheaper.
6. The teachers would also experience a new and innovative way of teaching especially when they are taught on how to do it and will also never miss teaching because they are still the one who will perform as teachers in the video.

7. It will be easier for the parents because they can just let their children watch the video and learn. It will not consume much time and effort in facilitating learning.

These are just some of the advantages that a student may get from watching a video lesson. This is not actually a way of convincing all the schools to adapt to this kind of learning method, since all the other methods have their own benefits but having a collection of video lessons could be considered to be a more effective option.
