AIMING FOR A HIGHER POSITION

by:
Yolanda Y. Santos
Teacher III, Hermosa Elementary School

We are proud educators. However, in real sense we do not stop trying to be promoted. Once, I have asked myself, what position do I see myself in the future? Should I strive to become a master teacher or a school head? These are the questions in my mind.

Teachers started their salary almost 5,000 monthly and this salary is not enough for giving the needs of the family. Ten years before that salary grade started to upgrade yearly. So as Teacher I, I decided to continue teaching. Some people think that teaching is just an ordinary job. They do not know that teaching is challenging. It requires more from us. And being promoted to the next level is not that easy. We have to earn M.A. Units.

Pursuing Master’s Degree is a great way to invest. Aside from you will learn so much, you will gain points in terms of ranking or promotion. After reaching the Teacher III position, I have realized that I want to become a master teacher.

Master teachers are masters of teaching. These teachers guide and help others. They are known for their expertise. They conduct SLAC and mentor teachers. They develop and implement innovations. They also do action research for the betterment of the teaching and learning process. They are the key players of the school who work for the entire benefit of the schoolchildren.

On the other hand, if I am not destined to become a Master Teacher, I may consider myself to become a school head. Being a school head is being the leader of the organization.
The performance of the school relies heavily on what kind of leadership that the school head has. It is a tremendous task. It is a more challenging duty.

However, whatever higher position we are aiming, we must only remember one thing: Do the duties bestowed upon us accordingly. By following the mandates and fulfilling our duties, we can never go wrong.

Reference:

https://www.slideshare.net/joems_angel2000/deped-master-teacher-i-and-ii