ALTERNATIVE SCHOOL

by:
Gloria C. Alquizar
Teacher III, Hermosa National High School

Due to the existence of the COVID 19 pandemic, the students are no longer advised to report to school temporarily to protect their health from the danger of the said disease. Therefore, the teachers and parents have to resort to another place for these learners to study and that the home is the ideal alternative school for them.

What should be the features of the home, being the alternative school during a pandemic?

The home should be a safe place for learning in terms of health. Since we follow the safety protocols to be saved from COVID 19 virus, our home, being the alternative school, should also have the same measures to follow. The health of the learner is our primary concern.

It is a conducive site for learning. This means that the home should be a favorable location for the learners to study peacefully, with no interruption, no noise, or any forms of disturbances. The alternative school should be encouraging to the learners.

It is a flexible place to conduct different activities. Different subjects may require different styles of learning. That is why the house or home should be adaptable to the academic needs of the learner. The parents should support the learners with regards to the needed location for their studies.

It is a creative location for learning. The parents or guardians may set up a particular place where children could gladly study because it is composed of designs and materials that are inviting and appealing.
It is adequate in terms of the necessary learning resources. However, with the school's help and the teacher, Self-Learning Modules and other essential materials should be contained in the alternative school. The learners would feel the school ambiance if this will be done. These are the features of the ideal alternative school that parents and guardians may consider.

Indeed, homeschooling or remote learning would be fun if the features above are evident in the alternative school.

References:
