AND THE END IS NEAR

There is no such easy thing as a fresh start. There is always a fang of heaviness in every step. The hardships seem to get weigh every single day.

There were no excuses to accept though the thought of reality is crying out loud. We never stopped even some parts of our wholeness as a person wanted to run and hide. There were moments that our minds refused to understand. We felt being frozen in some moments. A little light was nowhere to find for us to be inspired by that time. Somehow with a little push from our superiors and colleagues, we were able to stand and start. We were almost at the edge of a cliff ready to get drawn on the fears we never had experienced yet we were so afraid that time. Look at us now, we are almost done. We are nearly approaching the end of the school year. We did not stop. And this is somehow unbelievable. Knowing the so many deficiencies that we have. Yet, we survive. Although this was not a hundred percent successful, still having a small step can be called a success already. Coming from a developing country like us, continuous learning with this new trend is an achievement to be claimed considerably.

Few more months and we can say we did it. We only need a few more months. And this is certainly giving us a new realization once again that we can make it. We may doubt ourselves at first but from the tags and encouragements of our very own people, we will rise and make it until the end.
