APPRECIATING SOCIAL STUDIES SUBJECT

by:
Isabelita A. Pantig
Teacher III, Paraiso Elementary School

Reminiscing the past is such a rewarding experience for we get to know the significant events and people that shaped our history and we are able to know the activities pertaining to our society.

By studying Social Studies, one may take a flashback of the past. The schoolchild may look at the events that transpired in the past. This is recalling the happenings that shaped our history.

By studying Social Studies, one may discuss important historical figures. They are the important leaders and heroes who sacrificed their lives just to fight for the freedom and liberation of their people.

By studying Social Studies, one may discuss current issues that we have today. They are the relevant and timely issues that affect the citizens in our society at this time.

By studying Social Studies, one may know the success of people. They are the people who excelled in various fields and contributed to the progress of our society and even of the world.
By studying Social Studies, one may understand different cultures. These are the cultures and traditions of the different raises and the way they live and behave in their respective places.

By studying Social Studies, one may give information on different places. Social Studies may provide geographical information. The information about a certain country, including their capital, regions and other geographical facts, may be given.

By studying Social Studies, one may express views and perspectives. This is a free subject area wherein the learner may express their views on a certain issue in the society where they live.

By studying Social Studies, one may study the economy of different nations. Social Studies may inform the learners on the economic conditions and aspirations of the different countries in the world.

Teachers and learners need to appreciate Social Studies for the benefits that it serves to the field of education.

References: