BECOMING A GLOBAL TEACHER
by Imelda C. Sacramento
Master Teacher I (Pinulot Elementary School)

What does it take to become a global teacher? Does she need to be able to teach the 21st-century goals? How do we define a global teacher?

A global teacher is a facilitator. Wherein pupils learn by doing. She should craft lessons, strategies and teaching techniques which are suited to the needs and abilities of his/her learners.

She should also bear in mind that the strategies and techniques used 50 years ago are not applicable at this time. She should be innovative to adapt to the fast-changing world. Since it’s a millennial age she must learn how to use the social media platform to communicate with your pupils.

A global teacher is a competent teacher who is armed with enough skills, appropriate attitude, and universal values to teach pupils with both time-tested as well as modern technologies in education in any place in the world.

More specifically, a global teacher should have more than the qualities and characteristics in addition to knowledge, skills, and values. She must understand how the world is interconnected, recognize that the world has a rich variety of ways of life, has a vision of the future would be for herself and her pupils, must be creative and innovative, understand the diversity of cultures, believe that education will sustain the future, able to facilitate other forms of learning, have depth knowledge, possess good communication skills and more importantly, possess the competencies of professional teachers.

Certainly, global education requires future teachers having the skills for the 21st century so that all will be ready to play a significant role to provide educational access to all types of learners all over the world. This teacher is a global teacher, and there are millions of global teachers needed now and in the future.

But the most important thing is the teacher should love his job. According to Abraham Lincoln “one should love the job and for sure you will never have to work a day”. Pupils will be motivated when they see their teacher having the passion for his job. And this positivity will transpire to your pupils and much likely learning will be successful.

Reference:
https://blog.learningbird.com/how-to-become-a-21st-century-teacher/