The academic achievement is the top priority in any educational institution. This is for achieving excellence in the quality of education that the school offers to the educational clientele.

On the other hand, there are times that the school provides extracurricular activities for the learners. This is for their additional experience and enjoyment. The pupils enjoy most in extracurricular activities because they express themselves in their inclinations.

Time management skill is learned and the pupils may learn to balance between academic and extracurricular activity. The child may be able to divide time in studies and in the activities that promote his or her talents.

The pupils indulge themselves with novel and useful skills. It is nice for the children to learn new activities whether it is indoor or outdoor. This also exposes them to useful skills that involve the practical ways like the life survival skills.

Extracurricular activity helps the schoolchildren to develop a sense of commitment. Teach the children that whatever they are doing they need to be committed. They have to pay attention and put their respective hearts and souls in worthwhile extracurricular activities in the school.

The sense of responsibility is also nurtured in the extracurricular activities. Have the schoolchildren to bear in mind that they have to be very responsible whether they are performing a sport or artistic talent.
Gaining new friends or companions is possible if one indulges in extracurricular activities. The schoolchildren will increase the list of their friends if they involve themselves in extracurricular activities.

Having an extracurricular activity may serve as a prelude to new activities. If one starts to do a particular activity this could be linked to other endeavors. Let say if someone starts to sing this could be connected to dancing since both are requiring music or sound.

If someone does an extracurricular activity, he or she could gain more opportunities. There are people who will notice your talent and potential and this could lead to something bigger and better.

Engaging in extracurricular activities is advantageous to the child who is dreaming of a rewarding, colorful and productive life.
