“They say it takes two to tango- but it takes THREE in education.”

The education system is one of the pivotal aspects in a society. People say that well-educated citizens contribute to the progress of the nation. The success of the education system, however, does not solely depend on the school. It takes THREE….

The SCHOOL, is responsible in providing quality education for learners. The best and well-suited curricula are being implemented to ensure that the learners will acquire the best education as possible. Seminars and trainings are being held to equip the teacher with knowledge they need to impart to learners. Learners’ materials and other visual aids are being provided to help students.

Government is also doing its part. It provides budget for the Department of Education (DepEd). It also promulgates laws, policies and guidelines to make the learning process easier for learners. It also provides financial assistance and scholarships to less fortunate students. It also allots subsidy to schools and universities to reach its goal of providing quality education.

The parents must also do their part. The learning process does not end in the four corners of the classroom alone. It needs follow-up from parents. Teachers need the cooperation of the parents in teaching the pupils. It is vital to the growth of the learners, especially in the foundation stage. The teachers really seek the help of parents especially in teaching children how to read. This is one of the basic yet crucial parts in learning. Parents must realize that they need to teach their children also so there is a higher level of mastery.

Parents also need to know the status/condition of their children in school. Parent-Teacher conferences are being held by the school so parents may know what is happening to their children. If a problem arises, it will not be magnified, as it will be given solution as swiftly as possible.
They are also needed not only in the academic aspects but in other areas as well. Learners also need the guidance of their parents to succeed. There are situations in school wherein learners face problems, which, if traced/rooted in, has something to do with their family conflicts.

It takes two in dancing but it takes three in education. SCHOOL. GOVERNMENT. PARENTS. If these three parts will work well together, camaraderie and quality education will be achieved and learners will greatly be benefited.
