CONNECT IS THE SECRET

by:
Karen Joy S. Baluyot

Human interaction helps us to overcome some of our struggles in everyday life. It also helps us to hone our skills on how we communicate and be flexible with every individual we encounter. And with good communication skills, we make a certain form of bond towards each other.

Good communication is important both in personal and professional aspects of life. Effective communication in the workplace creates a positive and healthy colleague relationship. It can also lead to friendship and company success.

People tend to misunderstood when the message was passed incorrectly. It can create confusion and conflicts with each other. Wrong information input generates wrong output and can be a waste of time.

Miscommunication has also direct impact to company objective. If a person erroneously comprehends, he will most likely to dispense disorganized data and may overlook some important details. No one would want to take the blame. Having effective communication builds rapport and trust throughout the company.

Every individual in the workplace must possess a good communication starting from the leaders to team members. It’s all about connecting with people. Better connection with coworkers creates positive and substantial work environment.

References:

https://leadershipchoice.com/power-good-communication-workplace/