CREATING A POSITIVE LEARNING CULTURE

by:
Edgar P. Carbonilla
Teacher II, Luakan NHS

Positivity should be implanted in the school. Positive learning culture as implemented among schoolchildren may motivate them and may lead to quality learning. To be able to create a positive learning culture, the teachers nowadays must be aware of the following insights:

Openness to the students. Ask for their expectations. It is a good practice that the students are given a privilege to ask questions about what to transpire for the day’s class and to give them a chance to express their expectations and needs. They should be given a chance to verify and clarify difficulties in learning. Indeed, students love to see openness in the classroom setting.

Fairness and equality among learners. Everyone is an important individual and has the opportunity to share. Promoting and creating positive learning culture may be possible if the teacher is fair to all regardless of age, status, religion, appearance, family background, intelligence and among others. The equality in the treatment of the students may contribute to the achievement of positive learning culture.

Teacher’s smile and pleasantness. Smile truly attracts and it is highly anticipated that teachers should wear a big smile in order to invite the students to learn. The learners would be more inspired and motivated if the teachers are more pleasant and easy to deal with. The image of a loving parent or facilitator should be evident in reaching success in the educative process.

Implementing innovations and trends. The excitement in learning may be revitalized. The teacher who introduces innovations in the class and employing the latest trends in teaching may help in the creation of positive learning culture in the school. The students may be more interested in school and may consider it as the venue for fruitful learning if the teachers are implementing novelty and new approaches in teaching. Thus, positive learning culture is established.

Close supervision of teachers. Students always need to be guided in dealing with the school challenges. There may be difficulties in the acquisition of skills and knowledge among learners but these may be resolved by the teacher through close supervision. Consequently, if the students are well-supervised and guided, they will be able to feel positive learning culture in the school.

Openness; fairness and equality; smiles and pleasantness; innovations and trends; and close supervision are the significant keys in attaining positive learning culture in our educational institution.

Let us hail positive learning culture in our school!

---

Electronic References:

https://thehighlyeffectiveteacher.com/6-ways-to-build-a-positive-classroom-culture/. Retrieved: 18 April 2018