DEVELOP READING PASSION

by:
Sylvia D. Gatus
Teacher III, Orani National High School

A man owes to read for it will lead him or her to learning. That is why it would be a good practice if a child develops a reading passion. The love for reading makes one closer to discovery and exploration of the many good things in the world.

Reading is a vital skill to be used in learning all the subject areas in our school. It is believed that a child who is more inclined to reading achieves better learning and at the same time develops passion for reading.

Start reading at home may promote the passion for reading. The child who starts reading at a young age with the help and guidance of parents becomes more passionate in reading.

Providing constructive feedback to the child is one effective means of encouragement. The child may improve his or her reading skill if the feedbacks coming from the parents or teachers are constructive and positive.

Expose to different reading materials. These reading materials may attract the child to more interesting and educational stories and information that would appeal to his or her mind and emotion.

Talk with the child on the materials read. The conversation with the child regarding the texts read may be helpful in developing more passion for reading. It is good for the child to express what he or she read.
The child may also join group reading. In this way the child may feel the interests and enthusiasm of other readers. Joining group reading is fun and exciting. It also boosts the passion for reading.

Visiting libraries is also a way to develop the passion for reading. The voluminous reading materials in the library are appealing to the eyes and make the learner feel the treasure of knowledge.

The teachers and parents are the ones to instill the value of reading. If the student is well-guided on the importance of reading in one’s life then the passion for reading is achieved.

Rewarding the efforts of the child in reading is such a good practice. Let the child feel that he or she is being recognized and appreciated.

Reading is an indispensible thing that a child should always consider in the discovery of knowledge and for learning.

References:
https://childdevelopmentinfo.com/learning/reading-instruction-children/#gs.8c2xxw