They say that teaching is the noblest profession. Teachers play a vital role in educating a child. When a teacher enters in a classroom, he plays different roles. The first place where kid’s behaviour develops and sharpens the heads of the learners is in the school. Teachers must carry a positive and negative behavior toward students.

Teacher carries a big responsibility in her second home, the school. The teacher controls what is inside and outside the school. The teacher creates a warm and protective environment. It is a place where one learns. Kids learn fast when they manipulate things by themselves. Here are some of the different roles of a teacher.

Teacher as a parent. The teacher gives her love and care to his pupils. He gives advices whenever a pupil needs it. He pays attention to any suspicious signs that could bother the pupil. The teacher takes time to find out what is going on with the pupils in the classroom. She gives praises when a pupil has done something good and corrects them whenever they have done something bad.

Teacher as a role model to her pupils. He guides and gives respect to her pupils. He serves as a role model not only in the class but also in the society. They think that the teachers are knowledgeable about the different subjects in the class. They view teachers as wise and therefore they look up for them. A teacher is someone you can trust and you can lean on. Sometimes pupils ask the help of teachers not only with their difficult lessons in class but also with regards to their family problems. Sometimes the teachers’ attitudes could have a positive and negative influence on pupils. Pupil’s confidence can be lifted up because this could create ambitions in their minds for future academic success. Teachers give their love, care and share their talents to pupils in order to become successful persons in the future.

Teacher as a learning facilitator. The teacher helps his pupils make the learning easy for them. He shares his knowledge to his pupils without getting any return only to see his students implement and apply what he has learned in the future. He nurtures the minds of the students to become successful someday on the field that they would choose. He is in charge of the whole class and of the activity she has presented. He should be able to facilitate students to do various activities. The pupils enjoy having their teacher with them whenever they do their activities. He should offer feedback whether it is positive or negative. He answers to some questions and offer guidance.

Teacher as a resource. Teacher wants to be helpful and available anytime the students come for a help. Students often ask lots of questions and they expect a lot from their teacher. They say that teachers can be one of the most important resources students have when they ask how to say or write something. He gives sources to the students to do the activities like materials and whatever they need.

Teacher as an observer. The teacher goes around the class during the students activities. He observes what the students do whether it is an individual, a pair or a group work. She does that to give useful feedback, check learning and provide support if necessary.

Teacher as a planner. Teacher plans everything before he does her work. Before going to school, the teacher makes her lesson plans. He chooses the materials and methodology or strategy he will be using to attain her goals. He anticipates problems, selects designs and adapts materials in her class.

Teacher as an evaluator. Teachers should be able to give their assessment or feedback in the activities that the students made. She gives correction and grades students in various ways. Teachers evaluate their students as part of daily learning through a range of activities including dialogue and interaction. The teachers assess the students on written work and on products such as artworks and projects.
