EDUCATION AND THE LAW

by:
Claire B. Torres
Teacher III, Limay Elementary School

The 1987 Philippine Constitution stipulated the objective of all schools in our country. It says: the school shall inculcate patriotism and nationalism, foster love of humanity, respect the human rights, respect the roles of national heroes in the historical development of the country, teach the rights and duties of citizenship, strengthen ethical and spiritual values, develop moral character, and personal discipline, encourage critical thinking, broaden scientific and technological knowledge and promote vocational efficiency.

These brief and accurate objectives should motivate the home, school, and society to pool their resources in meeting the high-quality education for global competitiveness and national self-sufficiency.

For parents and students this constitutional provision should provide a well-defined direction on what to expect in the hierarchy of formal education. A balance education covers all the areas mentioned above.

In framing of curriculum and programs of studies, mentors and school administrators should consider the objectives mentioned in the Philippine Constitutions.

Schooling foundations have a significant task to carry out in manufacturing this new commitment model with youngsters and in developing a feeling of shared duty regarding our regular future. This is the reason a critical mainstay of worldwide citizenship training is finding out about the standard of law.
Advancing the run the show of law through instruction moreover makes a difference learner obtain the information, aptitudes, values, and demeanors they have to be contribute helpfully to society. It permits them to emphatically shape open educate and their arrangements, subsequently empowering non-violent and quiet roads of civic engagement.

After all, education is a basic in producing citizens who are knowledgeable not only in theory and principle but in equipping them with ability to understand and adjust to the ever-changing trend in relationship.

References:

(2005) Health and Home Book

