The pandemic situation affects the lives of the many students, families, and communities. This special phenomenon is compiling stories and solutions from schools around the world doing their best for college kids. Health officials are currently taking steps to stop the introduction and spread of covid 19 into communities across the planet.

In these challenging times, tools, resources, and innovations are suggested, but how can we find ones that are significant, reliable, and dealing for everyone? People around the world can feel the effect of coronavirus. Evidently, most schools are closed and the quarantine methods are being implemented. While everyone is doing their best to slow down the outbreak, global sectors in education are working so hard in order to respond to the needs of these trying times. Their job is to assist everyone in providing quality education for all even in these exceptional times.

The Department of Education believes the importance of schooling to create a far better nation. Education enriches the brains with new and valuable information for the people to think, analyze, and process to embrace new perspectives, ideas, beliefs, and cultures. As a result, the Department of Education had a web training for the teachers in preparation for virtual, online, and modular learnings.

Since the government prohibited mass gatherings and observe social distancing, DEpED conducted remote enrollment wherein teachers called their former pupils to enroll in their next grade level. It had been an excellent challenge to all or any teachers to speak with the oldsters of their former pupils since teachers strictly follow the Act of 2001, the primary national law “No child left behind”. The DepEd reached out to the government Unit and put kiosks on public places for the enrollment sort of pupils that weren't listed on remote enrollment.

With these efforts, Filipino teachers and learners are often ready to cope up with the challenges we face immediately. the easy, yet effective solutions provide support and resources for folks, teachers, and learners to assist them to navigate into the proper path of education.
