Many young children when asked what they would like to be when they grow up, most probably “To be a teacher” will be one of their answers. Once a teacher you will be revered because of your outstanding qualities.

Too many, you may be just a teacher, but to children, you are somebody, you are a hero. You always takes a hand, opens mind touches lives and heart of many children. Teachers wants to be a teacher not because of monetary gains. We know how much a public and private school teacher in the Philippines receive. They just want to be a teacher because of their good and pure heart. We all know good teachers when we see them.

The natural qualities shine on them. But what makes a good teacher? We can see many people very busy amassing wealth, power and fame. They forget that there is something more to life than material things. Look at a teacher, he/she is very busy structuring his/her room, teaching the children managing the classroom and doing almost everything just to produce a child who will be inculcated with values plus the cognitive development. But what are the qualities that make a good school teacher? According to Salandananan, author of educational books, a teacher is one who possesses:

. Confidence. Belief in oneself despite setbacks. Teachers encounter situations all the time that could be considered setbacks. Kids can be cruel, to each other and to teachers. They can have attitudes, especially teenagers. But the teacher remains to be positive.
Patience Teachers really tried hard to explain every lesson even repeatedly. She patiently monitors almost everything about the individual student.

True compassion for their students. The best teachers cared about their students as individuals and wanted to help them. Good teachers are willing to speak up for the students to other teachers, if need be. They cared about us beyond the walls of their classroom.

Understanding, noble teachers had understanding, proper bond of how to teach. They didn’t get a rigid procedure that they insisted on via unchanging if it didn’t evade us learn.”.

Results for Understanding. fine teachers

Passion for TeachingThe superlative teachers aren't moral concerned in their subject, they are passionate about it. They are furthermore passionate about numerous other things. There are still many other inner qualities of a teacher, but a teacher must always remember that the quality of life is more important than life itself. Let us all develop the inner qualities that add meaning to our life. Only then we can say that we live everyday as a hero to our students.
