As a teacher of the new millennium, it is expected that you exude the teaching ability that is far beyond the usual. You need to enhance your instructions to withstand the challenges in the teaching profession.

Visualization is one good practice in order to improve your instructional skill. By instructing the pupils to look at the objects in the real world in different settings then learning may take place thus the strategy may become effective.

Cooperative learning also helps to improve teaching instruction. This allows the pupils to work together cooperatively in sharing ideas regarding a particular topic or subject matter. The best thing in cooperative learning is that the teacher acts as a facilitator while the pupils are actively participating in the classroom interaction.

Inquiry-based instruction is another teaching instruction that promotes better learning and achieves better teaching. The child becomes an inquisitive individual searching for answers or information related to the major topic in the class. Thus, the teacher makes the pupils active in searching for knowledge and this makes them learn.

Differentiation which is one addressing individual needs may be instrumental in enhancing teaching instruction. The teacher may systematically prepares activities suited to the pupils in the class thus helping them learn better.
Technology in the classroom is said to be the most appealing way to the pupils at present. The teacher may execute very well in teaching once technology is applied. Teaching may be made more easy and less in effort through the use of technology.

Behavior management is also one way to enhance the teacher instruction. If the pupils are well-managed in terms of behavior then there will be a great success in teaching.

Professional development is also a key in enhancing teaching instruction. Through further studies the teacher may learn meaningful ideas to improving his or her teaching ability.

The teacher who enhances his or her teaching instruction is better. Thus, according to the Japanese proverb, better than a thousand days of diligent study is one day with a great teacher.

The teaching instruction is comparable to the power that a warrior uses in battle. If a teacher has better teaching instruction, he or she has more chances of performing better in the school. Thus, this can may him or her more efficient and more effective
