EQUALITY: YOUTH LEARNING

by:
Cheryl G. Cruz

Feminist movements are becoming alive again after domestic violence and harassments against women rose in numbers. The fact that it is already 21st century makes me wonder why people are still not valuing equality among genders despite all the papers, ads, and call outs to show respect are posted everywhere. This is such an alarming things seeing the possibility of the youth just continuing the disrespect to other gender especially women when it is their time to lead the world. Feminism has made great impacts to women's lives in terms of suffrage, working conditions, and leadership such as in the country United Kingdom (UK), Marsden (2020) cited. Learning through the violence against women and girls made me realized how lucky I was not experiencing those and also pushed me to highlight that it is now the right time to allocate some pages in the students' textbooks the lessons prior to feminism and not just allot a portion of a leaf for its definition.

At peace. Encouraging the youth learn to render respect to women would give the adults the peace of mind that their descents and children will be respected by others as well. Streets will not be such a journey to a monster world for some men will no longer look at girls as prey ready to be victimized. The thought of seeing men not blaming women for their way of dressing themselves as the root of harassment but also defending the latter and getting the idea of style and comfort. There will be decreased rates of domestic violence since the equality among genders is already a thing. The future fathers will no longer see their spouses as servants to the family and just someone ready to serve the members.
All genders. Can you imagine why people are disrespecting other genders such as transgender and gays? This is because they can disrespect real women and this means that those who are women by heart are more prone to discrimination and hurtful acts. If the essence of feminist movement will be taught to the boys, it is certain that they are going to respect all genders and sexes despite the appearance and the actuations. Besides, everyone has to be informed that every individual is entitled to his or her own identity.

Equal opportunities in everything. Jobs, education, lifestyle, business and many other essential aspects of living will no longer settle for just muscle strength but will provide equal chance to whoever deserves and wants them. There will no more women to be forced to agree in an arranged marriage, forced to have kids, forced to have a family just because of societal pressure and norms.

Feminist movement is more than just a call to equalize the way people see men and women. It opens more doors for both sexes and even to other genders. This opens new world of acceptance to those who are not brave enough to show what they can do due to the pressure being imposed by the society that believed that women are dedicated to bear a marry, bear a child, and serve like a maid to her man and children. It is already 21st century and it is now the right time to wake everyone up on the context that things really have changed. World is no longer about muscles but of logical thinking and understanding others, with arms open to embrace differences without downgrading any side. The youth, they badly need to learn such.

References: