ETHICAL MINDSET

by:

Mary Grace D. Bagtas
Teacher III - Pablo Roman National High School

“We’re in a huge car heading towards a brick wall and everyone’s arguing over where they’re going to sit” – David Suzuki

In every trip we had in life, our mind is set to seek something that is still undecided. Every individual discover things existing on these ocean of galaxies. We are all fond of eating the fruits of knowledge but still nothing in life. We are desperate to climb up the mountain of higher class and gather the seeds of fame and wealthiest, but we don’t even stand and walk to the right path. It is impossible for us to reach the land of treasures if we do nothing and if we remain the definition of living valued and unknown.

Failure is an integral part of success. In or out of legal age can grasp on the connotation of failure. But dig deeper and mine the treasures of success from the land of failure, and give an eye on every lusters of it, we will clearly see the reality behind the so-called success, and it is about knowledge of perfect money mindset.

In life, we are all accustomed to the equation, “income-expense-savings”. Our mind focuses just on expenses. We give less attention to savings among all the variables. We deemed to that equation as our key to success, where it is enough that savings came from the leftovers of our income. If we call that as our perfect money mindset, then we must now start digging a rectangular hole and wait for quietus to come because it will lead us not to success but to hunger and poverty.

The real perfect money mindset starts from understanding, unlearning, relearning and change. We need not to understand everything just to gather success, but what important is to focus on defining the true key for living. We all need to learn on how to unlearn. It is necessary for us to obviate those inessential things that have been ingrained in our minds. We need to plant another load of knowledge for us to harvest the forthcoming change. This will help us earn success because this is the ethical inerrable mindset.

According to some philosophers and researchers, those who were, are, and will earn success are those who know the true meaning of success. All of us have our own fate to ride on. It is either the horse of passive income and the horse of active income. Some will feed their horses with money, but mostly fed them with blood and sweat. But ever wondered why successors chose to ride not just one horse but both? It is just simply because two horses are much faster than one. By that, they can easily reach the ends of the rainbow which is called the success.

In summary, we all have the opportunity to be the navigator of our own cars in life. We don’t need to argue where to sit down when we’re heading up towards a wall, because we all have the sovereignty to step on the brake, flee and destine to the right track. We all have the choice to move forward and gather the victory of life. By that, as the time pass by, the leaves fall, but we can still stand strong for our own family, for the nation, and for our better future.

References: