FINDING HAPPINESS IN A TEACHER’S JOB

by:
Marygrace N. Santos
Teacher III, Magsaysay National High School

In any kind of work, everyman should focus in his work that he considers his life force. Be it an office employment, self-employed or a career. Much more for a neophyte teacher, in a first glance, a beginning teacher may be discouraged upon looking on unruly or undisciplined children, but as time goes by through the guidance of her superior he/she can overcome her worries, and now beginning to love the children and his/her work. The teacher must give his/her best and strive for the best in order to succeed. Usually, if he or she is hardworking, he/she will reap the fruits of his/her labor. As Pele puts it, Success is no accident, it is hard work, perseverance, learning, studying, sacrifice and most of all, love of what you are doing or learning to do.

Many people take their work for granted. They just wait for the 15th and 30th of the month for their salaries. Everyone should have contentment in their job. They must consider it as their lifeblood. You must value your work, of course one is about financial matters, but you must remember, that a job is not all monetary gains. It is important to distinguish the job and the way you do it. This is very important because there are some aspects of the job that may seem unpleasant to you.

There are people who don’t love their job. The best thing is to be positive in your job. Don’t feel bad on waking up. Don’t be bored, frustrated or weary about your job early and going to work every morning.

To overcome all this, give your all. You can delegate your authority but not your responsibility. Go out of your way to make others happy for the real measure of humanity.
References: