Going to school is one of the most exciting parts of our student adventure since we will be able to acquire a variety of skills and knowledge throughout this time. We also learn how to deal with various situations that may happen from time to time during this endeavor. Because of the epidemic, the ordinary became extraordinary. Almost everywhere in our country, there is an invasion of covid 19 cases every day. Because we are now living in a changing environment and lifestyle as a result of this happening, government agencies have devised a variety of learning methods and procedures known as flexible learning. For today’s students, flexible learning has become the new normal.

Do you know what flexible learning entails? It’s a collection of educational methodologies and technologies aimed at giving students more options, convenience, and personalisation to suit their requirements. Flexible learning was not a newbie in certain countries, since it had been used as one of their techniques for delivering high-quality education long before the pandemic. It may sound difficult and frustrating because we are not used to it, but with different methods of learning the learners may choose their preferred way of learning based on their specific situation. Utilization and creativity are needed in this kind of learning because they must maximize the potential of the resources and the allotted time for each learner effectively. Educators may use various learning modalities in executing these strategies such as digital or printed modules, audio or video clips, television or radio broadcasting and online learning platforms.

This pandemic affects almost all our aspect in our well-being, from our daily routines up to our mental capabilities. We must not let this disturbance prohibit us from moving forward. Adapting the new normal is one way on how we can move forward, being open minded to changes and new ideas will not cost us anyway. Let us hope that we learn the lesson and be able to move forward of this disruption.
