FLEXIBLE TEACHING

by:
Virginia A. Danque
Teacher III, Capitangan Elementary School

In this time of uncertainty, teachers are opted to be versatile and resilient. That is why they need to apply flexible teaching to address the needs of the learners and the demands of the situations.

Flexible teaching is a kind of approach that leads the teachers to adjust their ways or methods of teaching to aid the students in the attainment of competencies or skills in school.

It is student-centered. The application of flexible teaching in school may render services to the students. Flexible teaching is being employed for the benefit of each student that is why it is considered as student-centered.

It is adaptive. Flexible teaching makes things suitable for the learners. The teacher is expected to employ strategies and activities that would be suited to the needs and interests of the learners in a certain subject matter in a particular learning area.

It is creative. It is said that flexible teaching is versatile because it uses unique and artistic approaches to win the hearts of learners. It is filled with fun and excitement in the execution of the lesson.

It is inclusive. Flexible teaching is said to be inclusive because it adjusts its objectives for the sake of the students. It keeps everyone included to its educational goals and activities.
It is engaging. It is also considered engaging because it attracts the attention of the learners because it provides an atmosphere of excellence and zest in the class. Flexible learning is appealing and attractive to learners because the teacher is being creative in presentations.

It is responsive. Flexible teaching is responsive because it addresses the needs and interests of the learners. The teacher includes topics and activities that are fitted to the wishes and inclinations of the students for further learning.

It is supportive. It is considered supportive because it really takes care of the welfare of each learner. The teacher’s instruction is being done for the benefit of every learner, to absorb knowledge and to possess competencies.

It is encouraging. It is said to be encouraging because it leads the schoolchildren to better learning because the main reason why the teacher is doing her best is for them to attain competencies or skills.

Flexible teaching is indeed admirable because the teacher ensures that no learner is left behind and everyone receives quality education.

References:

Flexible Teaching.
https://flexteaching.li.duke.edu/#:~:text=Flexible%20Teaching%20is%20an%20approach,face%2C%20online%2C%20or%20hybrid.

The Importance of A Flexible Teaching Approach.
https://www.netcom92.com/2013/07/importance-flexible-teaching-approach