HOME

by:
Ethel Joyce T. Bartolome

All of us want to be in a place on where we really deserve or where we really want to be. On a place where we can say that we are comfortable and gives us a cloud nine feeling. Sometimes we want to go on a journey to a certain place because this is where we want to go or this is where we can get peace.

But there comes a part of our life that we want to seclude ourselves from others and be at the place we can call as our safe haven where we will be able to find who we really are. Or be in that safe haven because we enjoy the vibe that certain place gives off.

There are people who are experiencing difficulty in life and will prefer to go to a place different on what they traditionally go to broaden their perspective about life. There are also people no matter what happens or what life throws at them who will stay on that certain place because they believe that place makes them happy and feel loved.

Meeting different person in different situation is part of the journey when we chose to start our travel. We should leave the mindset that we will be able to reach our destination – our deserved place. Those people we will meet may judge us for who we are and there will be those who will love us and will accept everything about us.

At the end of our journey, we will realize that we were not be able to reach the finish line without taking that big step at the start. That beginning where we were first taught to be who we are and how we will conquer the hurdles of life, that place which we call home.
References:

https://www.brainyquote.com/topics/place-quotes