HOW IMPORTANT IS PARENTAL SUPPORT TO STUDENTS’ PERFORMANCE?

by:
Lorna V. Julian
Teacher III, Luz Elementary School

Parental support to school activities is very important in order for student to perform well at school. But what if that is the big problem of some students?

If parental involvement doesn’t exist, probably there will be difficulty in improving one’s mental and physical productivity inside the school.

In every aspect, coordination and cooperation of parents for their children’s school life is very important. Students are dreaming to reach success that’s why they are studying in school. They are acquiring new learnings in order for them to feed their mind. The research team believes that aside from the individual ability of every student, they need to have full attention and support. It has something to do with a plant needed water in order to survive. Every student will be more active and progressive if their parents will support them in terms of financial and moral. This is the major concern of this research—to find exact information for that situation. Why it must be done? And why it should be solved?

Educational support by the parents to their children is very important. It is the foundation of every student to strive and survive at school. Even though there are so many schools offering free matriculations, there are still specific needs that only parents could provide. It is known that money is one of the necessities of every individual, most especially student who are studying diligently. Without financial you can’t afford to have material needs. It would be so hard to attain high grade and be involved in some school activities.
In school, we can easily identify who are the students who have golden spoon in their mouth. Those students who are neat in their physical look, having good and grooming character and most especially those who are excellent and achievers. Obviously, students having those characteristics are the children having supportive and nurturing parent.

The educational support coming from parent is very important because it is the factor cultivating every child’s performance at school. It also tells that those parental support could increase the self-confidence of every student. Children with involved parents attend school regularly, have better social skills, more positive about school and more likely to graduate and go on to higher education. Indeed, having supportive parent could really help them in many ways. It can give them strength, determination, inspiration and guts to finish their study and reach their dreams in life.

So how do we rate ourselves as parents? Are we that supportive enough to give what our children needs from us? Do we support the school where our child is studying? Do we participate in the school programs and activities that nurtures our child’s holistic well-being?

We might have different answers to these questions. But all parents could be the same in one aspect of our lives. All parents want the best for their children. And because his or her school completes almost half of our children’s lives, there really should be a good relationship between the school and the parents. The school needs the support from PTA and the parents expect that the school will give their children the education they deserve.

References:

Eldeeb, Z. et.al. The Impact of Parental Involvement on Student Academic Achievement. 2004