IMPLANTING TRUE VALUES

by:
Isabelita A. Pantig
Teacher III, Paraiso Elementary School

In this time that the young people are too preoccupied with technology and modern gadgets, implanting true values is very timely.

The child needs the value of benevolence. Showing kindness and compassion makes a person worthy of respect. The generosity is manifesting goodwill to others should be an implanted value within the child.

The value of respect is such a brilliant virtue. The act of giving high regard to others is an admirable deed. The schoolchildren should genially learn to respect others not only in school but also in the community where they live.

Integrity is one value that is learnt in the school. Having integrity is possessing honesty and honor within one’s being. Children should proclaim the truth and be also be on the side of the truth.

Trustworthiness is another important value that schoolchildren must keep nowadays. They should learn to trust and they should also be trusted. The children should learn responsibility and reliability. Be responsible and be reliable to win the trust of others.
Hard work is another relevant value that a child must possess. The love for work is important for one’s productivity and success. It is realizing the passion for labor. The ability to push oneself to efficiency in job is a sign of hard work.

The value of perseverance is one good thing to imbibe in life. Schoolchildren who are taught of this value tend to be more persistent and determined to meet their goals in life.

The value of patience is also considered a worth-learning value. If the children are taught to be patient, the result would be satisfactory. The ability to endure is commendable makes one tolerant.

The value of patriotism or love for country is relevant at all times. This builds the passion to serve the country and its people and this establishes the pride of being a citizen.

The aforementioned values are what our kids need at this generation. Let us implant them with real values. We have to relive within us great values that are timeless and noble.

References:
