INCEPTION

by:

BHENVY JAY D. MERINO

Teacher III, Mariveles National High School - Cabacabean

One of the most complicated periods of one’s life is how to get things started. Many of us would concur that from our first walk, the first day of school, the first work, the day after we get married, the first time you cuddle your first born, and the day after when a loved one leaves us, every first time in our lives one way or another scares us. We have a hard time starting out because we don't know why we have to start. Studies suggest that most people don't get what they want because they don't grasp precisely why they want it. Why do we need to know how to walk, why go to school, why get a job, and why get married? Why cuddle your child, and why move on after a loved one left. Most of the responses would definitely be because they want satisfaction and prosperity.

The year 2020, “The year of Pandemic,” is the year no one has foreseen. Every one of us is not prepared for all that happened. Many people fell to doubt, fear, and anxiety, which hit us hard, and caused many people to die; why? Because we didn’t know how to face this kind of Pandemic. We don’t know when and how to get things started. But through this Covid-19, a lot of doors open. The new normal introduces us with new hope and new beginnings!

As we all know, life is about test and trust. Most of the time it surprises us. But for the very least, you should understand why you do things for, and you should act for it. Joy is the measure of success anyway.

How to get started? Begin within yourself. Be ready and prepare yourself for success. Visualizing your goals determines that your actions will become your habit and sooner will be your character and will be your destiny. But when we think so much, we get tired and even before we get started.

A single step can launch a journey of a lifetime!

References: