INTERACTIONS OF THE 21ST CENTURY LEARNERS

by:
Vivian S. Roxas
Master Teacher I, Orion Elementary School

The classroom interaction today as compared to the past is quite different and it is adhering to the kind of students that we have today.

There are common ways that learners do for interaction in the class:

Thinking is one common way to interaction. It is thinking concepts and ideas as presented by the teacher and through thinking, comprehension or understanding is attained.

Using language, symbols, and text are vital in learning and in interacting. By means of language, symbols and text, the learner could easily convey messages.

Managing self in terms of class activity is a must in learning. It is the learner who has the power to participate and survive.

Relating to others is also required in the school since through mingling with others that we learn more. We could easily grow if we have people with us.
Participating and contributing are interactions that are important in group work. The collaboration of ideas is achieved by means of participating and contributing.

Innovating is also part of the school interaction nowadays. The learners like to introduce new ideas and novel things.

Critical thinking is also a new way to participate in the class. Teachers encourage students to think critically on various matters.

Communicating is also one good thing that the 21st century learners apply in school. They do not only communicate with their peers in the class but also online as well.

The 21st century is indeed upgraded and became more dynamic in class interaction.

References:

https://globaldigitalcitizen.org/21st-century-skills-every-student-needs