Unity has always been the strength. As truth speaks, it’s not only in intellectual human thought where this behavior has been applicable, even in the animal world from the ages. We can seldom see an elephant or a deer roaming alone in the jungle, because they always come as a herd. The sense of security they get moving as a herd is extremely important for their survival. Similarly, flock of birds also goes together as they fly in the sky to move to another place in “V” pattern which is a classic case study in the management world.

Similar scenario can be witnessed when men or women in a certain organization go in one direction, things can possibly happen. When they purposely gathered in any activity, goals and objectives are attained. They may be leaders of DepEd Bataan Division officials, supervisors, school principals and office staff, and classroom teachers on their own respective schools but when they meet and work together, these people know how to work hand in hand and subordinates submit themselves in one another as well as to their superiors who were experts on managing the organization but also leading them as one strong and unified productive organization.

Meanwhile, one may find the balance of work – family mechanism on them. In order to be balanced, individuals though leaders or subordinates or ordinary employees has to approach each role—work and family—with an approximately equal level of attention, time, involvement, or commitment. There should have a positive balance which suggests an equally high level of attention, time, involvement, or commitment, whereas negative balance refers to an equally low level of attention, time, involvement, or commitment. These inputs reflect an individual’s level of role engagement—in terms of time devoted to each role or psychological involvement in each task, a fatherly, motherly, sisterly, brotherly, relative character who has heart to support and protect each other as they aim to be excellent in every way and has to achieve ISO - CERTIFIED which matters most in this competitive time. It is difficult to imagine balanced individuals who are substantially more or less engaged in the work role than the family role. Hence, work–family balance is generally thought to promote well-being and unity is the art of making others important before oneself.

Based on the DepEd Mission and I quote, “It aims to protect and promote the right of every Filipino to quality, equitable, culture based and complete education. Wherein, the organization has very godly intentions for students to learn in a child-friendly, gender sensitive, safe and motivating environment.” Therefore, everyone was tasked to do their part to nurture every learner. But of course, the DepEd organization will not be successful without the support of the students’ family, community and other stakeholders who are actively engaged and shared responsibility for developing lifelong learners.
