Robots and AI are built to follow various commands, they are also programmed to act and move certain ways but what makes them far more advance is their ability to solve mathematical problems, to read, comprehend and write. Far more advance and way smarter, actually, than some of us, humans. But, wait a minute, if you are feeling down because these machines are smarter than you, then relax. They are made as an alternative to humans, they can read and write but using knowledge wisely is what makes humans different. Likewise, education empowers minds that will be able to conceive good thoughts and ideas, very unlikely to any high-tech robots and AI out there! Therefore, with human’s ability to be educated and make a difference to the world, we need to use it for good and for the betterment of this community.

With this in mind, it is true that education can lift a person out of poverty. It is true that education is the building blocks of the nation. It is true that education is the pathway to achieve a financially-stable, prosperous society. It is also true that education serves as the key to unlock the door of success and to fulfill the never-ending talk of world peace and harmony. Even so, according to ourworldindata.org, 17% of the world population remains uneducated. But that’s not the case in the Philippines because based on a report by United Nations, the Philippines has the highest literacy rate at 97.95% among Southeast Asian countries.

In addition, it’s not impossible for the Philippines to rank at the first place since the 1987 Constitution provides that “the State shall assign the highest budgetary priority to education”. Actually, Department of Education acquired P553.31 B which will be used for facilities establishment and maintenance, for hiring of teachers and non-teaching personnel and also for the learning materials of the students. Philippines has a good example of education system but what’s lacking is the voice of the citizens to stand against corruption and anomalies that kept on staining the way of governance. Nonetheless, the point is that education hones each individual and builds a successful society for everyone.

Moreover, youths nowadays must be aware that since they are the pillars of the nation and they are the future generations, they need to be mindful about the purpose of education and how it works in fabricating a structured life because it will guide them to fight with failure and to be progressive in their paths. In order to gain a fruitful future, children of today’s age have to keep in mind that self-confidence is a weapon and that can be obtain with education. Communicating efficiently and thinking logically, for example, is a good way to build confidence to overcome difficulties that impede them from reaching their goals. Consequently, in the long run, education ensures a successful future by means of recognizing the skills and talents to build up a career thus, to help achieve new heights in life.

To put it differently, education is diverse, itself. It has a lot of advantages which can be spread into the world and aside from what has been mentioned, is that education can also play a significant role by helping everyone to become good at their chosen field of profession; an educated politician knows how to rule, an educated doctor treats patients with compassion and humility, an educated driver knows how to talk to people politely, an educated teacher teaches effectively, an educated society can help everyone grow and develop as individuals in their respective fields, and a well-educated person respects everyone and has values and good conduct.

For the most part, if only does education can be implemented properly throughout the world, there is no poverty or illiteracy. There’s no crime or hunger for everyone deserves to be educated. Education has tons of advantages in developing an ideal world where people can live in. But in order to make this community a better place, proper and effective education must be applied to each and every one of us. Education should not be taken for granted given that there is no end to it, as in each and every stage of human life we learn something. Therefore, once again, we cannot open the locked door of success without the help of a key. Education is the key and the door that lead to success won’t open all by itself, unless we move it now. Nevertheless, it is totally up to us on whether we want to open that door or just leave it behind.
