In order to continuously serve the learners and to offer quality education, the Learning Continuity Plan (LCP) was formulated. This is a great move of the Department of Education (DepEd) to offer quality education and services to the educational clientele and stakeholders.

The Learning Continuity Plan (LCP) already set the opening and end of classes for the learners. To ensure the quality of education, the educational leaders allotted ample number of days and time for learning.

Though face-to-face is not applicable during this time of pandemic, the educational sector provides alternative learning modalities to still offer quality education to the learners. Modular learning, online learning, blended learning, radio-based and television-based learning are the choices.

The Learning Continuity Plan (LCP) also guarantees that teachers would have the essential teaching materials for teaching. Likewise, the learners should have the necessary learning materials in their homeschooling.

Another great thing under the LCP is that it involves the parents and the community in the education of the learners. The parents may guide the education of the learners while the members of the community may contribute in their own ways.

Though gatherings are not allowed, the plan still upholds the professional development of the teachers through webinars. These webinars provide new learning for teachers in order for them to offer quality education for the learners.
Learning Action Cell or LAC session is strengthened for the teachers to prepare themselves for the modality that would be used in the teaching-learning process. Having LAC sessions in preparation for teaching would raise the quality of education.

The Learning Continuity Plan is indeed worthy of praises because it aims to continue quality education among the educational clientele.

Indeed, LCP is commendable!
