LEADERSHIP BEGINS AT HOME

by:
Jennifer G. Baldonado
Teacher III, Banawag Elementary School

An action of leading a group of people or an organization is what we called leadership. It is the attribute of a person to inspire, to lead, and to mold the belief of his flock towards the direction of his espoused objective. Leadership is a science that is intrinsic to some persons however, it could also be acquired, enhanced and developed by someone who aspires to be a good leader.

Parents are the first and most influential influences on a child. Their examples greatly affect the kind of leaders they become. They are the common sources of the leadership of a child. They are the first to convey to a child how to be a good leader. How the parents objectively and equitably assign the simple household chores to a child is the most effective way of teaching, honing and developing a child’s to lead.

Firstly, our children must be enveloped by a community of love, affection and caring. Training is the most productive oasis of a child before becoming an effective leader. If leadership is not inculcated into a child’s awareness at home, then it is hard for him to acquire such. A well-disciplined child is likely to lead in a learning institution. Constant practice and training will develop him to be a successful leader.

At home, proper evaluation of a child's intellectual capacity and mental absorption should be closely observed and monitored. His reactions towards the turns of events should be properly analyzed to ascertain that he recognized the emotions adaptable to a given scenario. Children have the right to be informed of their family's condition and the reason for performing such designed household chores with optimum awareness. Failure to be informed will only aggravate the questions besetting his mind. He would just do a thing with a heavy heart. Not knowing the proper reason for doing designated work would only result in a child's series of whys. Parents, who neither exemplify good deeds nor appears questionable to his child, lose the respect and confidence of his kids thus building a barrier of disrespect and distrust between them.

It is the fervent responsibility of parents to see to it that the children perform their assigned obligations properly. Proper parenthood includes the development of a child. They should be guided accordingly. Respect, courtesy, honesty, and sincerity should be instilled into their minds always and forever. Belief and respect to the Holy Creator should top the parental teaching to their children. Parents should acknowledge the good deed of his child but likewise should confront him if he errs.

With this, we could produce a future leader anchored on the child's ability and development.

References:
https://www.leadershipnow.com/minute0016.html
https://en.oxforddictionaries.com/definition/leadership https://smallseotools.com/plagiarism-checker/