Schooling is such a competitive world, children need every help and support from us in order to maximize their full potential. In fact, children’s performance in school has more to do with parents than with their natural mental power or even their teachers. Parents should provide inspiration for their children because not every child is going to find it in school.

We as parents are the child’s first teacher. When we get involved in our child’s activities, they will do better things. Studies shows that what the family does is more important to a child’s school success than the amount of money the parents have in their pocket, or how much the education to parents have. Parents who want to help their children succeed in school must strike a proper balance. They should set limits but allow freedom. They should encourage their kids to excel but not expect perfection.

There are many ways to consider how we can help our children succeed especially in having a better grade.

> Help your child form study habits.
> Most children play when they got home. Let them be. But put in their mind that there is a time to play and a time to study. Give them specific time to study after school. Do it every day until it become their habit. Be strict in imposing the rule.
> Provide your child with a quiet place to study.
> Ask a child to go to a room, study room or a prayer room where there is no destructions, no video games, computer and away from television for him to study well.
Remind a child to perform well in the school.

Most parents bring their child every morning in school. Before they leave, they talk with their children to behave, listen and do what the teacher says, so they can fully understand the lesson.

Help your child believe in him/herself.

It will help them boost or show their confidence to express their opinions and ideas.

He/ She can answer the teacher’s questions without hesitations.

Increase your child’s interest in learning by proper motivation.

It makes the child curious, more excited and eager to learn something new.

Motivation makes the child more interested in learning.

Teach your child to use reference books, magazines and newspapers.

It is one of the best way children get more ideas to do their home works and projects.

Help your child read better.

Reading is a big help for children for learning because they will understand the selection. Be a model of the behaviour you want a child to be.

Help your child to learn to listen well.

Prepare a child’s heart to listen to you for him to understand your opinions or teachings.

Help your child to write legibly and fast.

Let the child choose the right pen that she wants in order to write legibly.

Help your child to study before taking a test.

Assist the child to review especially when there is a test.

Explain that if they will study harder they will get higher grades.

Let your child feel your love in teaching – learning.

Teach the child with love and passion.

Let them feel that they are appreciated.
➢ Orient your child to use high technology.
➢ Using technology is a very good way in improving child’s learning.
➢ They can research such things about their work or projects.
➢ Spend quality time for your child.
➢ Giving quality time to your kids can help them grow physically, emotionally and spiritually. You can discover a lot of things from them and sometime you can learn also from them.
➢ Provide the needs of your child in teaching and learning.
➢ Parents should prepare materials needed in doing some activities in school.
