LESSON LEARNED AMIDST PANDEMIC

by:
Jenalyn D. Padre
Master Teacher I, Ipag Elementary School

Today, we are facing tough times because of the challenges this pandemic has brought us. Through this phase of life, we are taking now, most of us do search what could be our role and how could we fulfill these roles to benefit our family, as well as the educational institution and the society where we belong. The former environment has changed, urging us to inevitably embrace what are beyond the normal or the usual things that we are accustomed of. This pandemic also transformed lives as whereas; this is marked by significant changes in our attitudes, behavior, physical and psychological traits as well. This is a period characterized by the desire to discover who we are and what we truly want in our lives. This is the time that not only Filipinos are experiencing shortcomings in all aspect. Pandemic teaches us how to give more value of our health, to strengthen the bond within our family, to prioritize things that are more important over material thing that we have in life. The most important in human’s life today is health not the money or the success in career. Money could not save life, whether you are rich or poor if Covid-19 virus attacks your health. The pandemic teaches us that family is more important than wealth, because having a family is a gift from God. Sometimes we feel that life does not seem fair to us. Academics may bring boredom, or fear because of the need to cope with new encounters of life. Pandemic changes our emotions, our beliefs and our faith. In the midst of our battle to these challenges, we have measured how deep our faith in God is. Pandemic also teaches us to sacrifice in name of our duty, family and serving other people without expecting anything in return.

References:

Author’s Personal Insights