The best teacher sees her students as a continuum of oneself; she is someone who has personified this for me.

What am I? A teacher. This teacher can be loving and a second mother of many pupils. A teacher is the adviser, counselor, model, giver, nurse, a companion, a friend and best of all a loving and second mother. It is an obligation and responsibility of the teacher to guide her pupils every day. As the pupils enters the room or school premises, we are obliged to teach them. As teachers, parents entrust their children on us.

However, there are circumstances that we are not that “perfect teacher”. We encounter pupils with different characters and attitudes. Some pupils are rude. Some are really uneasy to handle. Their weaknesses and strengths are revealed just right after some time including their abilities, likes and dislikes. Since teachers are the facilitators in their respective classes, they are the ones who manage their own pupils.

There are teachers who make their pupils understand the situations. There are some who give examples and tell their experiences in life. Teachers who share their stories are usually loving teachers. They are like your mother that will teach pupils to overcome all the struggles in life. They will teach learners how to behave, how to love and how to appreciate.
Let us accept the fact that we want to be appreciated by our parents. A loving teacher will teach you how your good character should be. A teacher is also a gift from God. For the pupils, remember all the teachers who give you advice, the one who cures your wounds, the one who touches your heart, the one who taps your shoulder, the one who wipes your tears, the one who makes you laugh, the one who says I love you, the one who prays for you, the one who makes you sings, the one who give you foods and money, and the one who cries when you are hurt. They are your loving teachers.
