MAY THE NET FORCE BE WITH YOU

“Are you familiar with phrase “May the Force be with you”?

This line was used to wish an individual or group good luck or good will. Nonetheless, in my subject, I can’t help but relate it to Newton’s first Law of Motion which states that every object will remain at rest or in uniform motion in a straight line unless compelled to change to its state by the action of an external force which is similar to inertia. The core of this law is that if no net force is employed to an object, then it will remain its constant velocity.

I am sure we are all hoping for our net force to be powerful in our classes. We hope that this law can be observed in our daily routines in school. Unfortunately, as we have observed, students make actions without any notice. They simply appear or disappear whenever they want to. In cognizant to those encounters, we certainly felt alarmed. It seems like our net force has no will nor impact toward our students. They just do whatever they want. They don’t wait for instructions. They do not care about guidelines. They simply want to decide come what may. They are so drastic, impulsive, and careless.

In summary, I am still hoping that in spite of our zero net force toward their actions, we can remain constant in guiding them. It is not a question if they will ever follow, rather, how can we stay faithful in attending to our duty to look after them in spite and despite of.
